WHAT so unsatisfying as the consummation of a "State Song?"

No UPRIGHT official need fear the Recall, be that official Constable or Judge.

If our Courts are to make law, why the expense of Legislatures and Congresses?

DIAZ has gone from Mexico. He went at once nor hesitated in the order of his going. The ending of the revolution against his tyranny is wonderful, though, in view of the assurances of the Big Business dailies all along that it was a mere shadow of revolt—incohesive as a rope of sand and as attenuated a spider's thread.

Will the Senate defeat Reciprocity, deny the people the right to vote for Senators, and refuse admission of Arizona into the Union? All right, gentlemen! The time is at hand when you are to learn that you are the servants, not the masters, of the people, and all your "dignity" and assumed superiority will go for naught.

MR. FRED LEHMAN, U. S. Solicitor-General, in a recent interview at St. Louis, took issue with Justice Harlan as to the meaning of the recent Standard Oil decision and upheld the Court. Mr. Lehman is an able lawyer, and one of those so-called Democrats whom Republicans delight to honor. It is perhaps natural that complaisance toward his friends and fellow dignitaries should color the vein of his thought.

In the last election the people of Illinois voted 447,908 for the initiative, referendum and recall and 128,398 against it—but the legislature refused to pass the bill for the amendment to the constitution. Some people believe that a majority rule—but they are off their trolley. This country is ruled by a minority, always was and will be until the people can vote directly on the laws. In times past men who would vote against public instruction would have been taken out and hanged—but they are honored to-day.—Appeal to Reason.

THIS is the way Congressman Legare, a soi-disant Democrat from South Carolina views the Recall:

"It is true that the people always want more power. Of course they want it. Once convince the people that through the call of the judiciary the absolute control of this government can be placed directly in their hands, no human agency can prevent their acquiring that power, and once given that power the old ship of state will veer toward the maelstrom of revolution and anarchy."

I would like some Democrat of the Legare brand to tell me just where government by the people should end, and to whom, beyond that line, it should be entrusted. I am bothered and seek good Democratic enlightenment.

LAST Monday was promulgated another "in the light of reason" decision by the U. S. Supreme Court, dissolving the big Tobacco Trust, but giving it six months in which to reform and become lawful. While agreeing with the judgment against the trust, Justice Harlan vigorously dissents from what he regards as an attempt on the part of his colleagues to usurp the lawmaking powers exclusively vested in Congress by the Constitution. In an oral statement, bristling with pungent adjectives, the venerable Kentuckian objects to those parts of the opinion, which, he says, reaffirm what it said recently in the Standard Oil case about the former decisions of the Supreme Court touching the anti-trust act. "We are reminded again," he declares, "of the necessity to apply the 'rule of reason' in the construction of an act of Congress which is, I think, expressed in language so clear and simple that there is no room whatever for misconstruction." He contends that Congress, with plenary and exclusive power over the whole subject, has signified its purpose to forbid every restraint of interstate trade and in every form, but that the court "has assumed to insert in the act by construction merely, words which make Congress say it means only to prohibit 'undue' restraint of trade."

Locust Due in Two Weeks.

Columbia, Mo.—Leonard Hase-man, state entomologist, announced to-day that the thirteen-year locusts would visit the state in two weeks unless something happens to throw them off the schedule.

The thirteen-year locusts are related to the seven-year variety but are not generally so destructive because they travel in smaller swarms. But great damage may be done by any of the locust family.

The state entomologist and his assistants are working overtime mailing pamphlets to the farmers of the state in an effort to teach them how to prevent damage by the pests. Science teaches no way of exterminating them or even of stopping their ravages when they have grown wings, but large numbers of them may be killed without difficulty when they are in the larvae stage.

Hogs and chickens are the farmer's chief helpers in getting rid of the larvae of the locust. Farmers whose places are threatened by the larvae had best turn their chickens loose in the fields and woods. A chicken can eat an incredible number of the locust and a hungry flock of hens will make short work of many thousands if allowed to hunt for them before the wings grow.

Small fruit trees or those which are near other varieties of trees may be stripped of fruit by the locusts. Whitewashing trees has been found ineffective to stop them.

Julian Hughes.

Died at her home in Sabula, Mo., after a long and painful illness of catarrh of the head, Tuesday, February 14, 1911, Mrs. Julian Hughes, wife of the late James Hughes, passed away from earth to where tear and sorrow are no more.

The deceased was born March 24th, 1828, in St. Francois county, living to the old age of 82 years, 10 months and 20 days. She was reared in St. Francois county with her parents, until the time of her marriage in December, 1848, to James Hughes. To this union eight children were born. Two preceded the mother to the golden shore, 6 survive to mourn her departure. The funeral was held the following day on account of her being in the house under quarantine with small pox. No services were held, and the relatives were only permitted to view the remains from the quarantine limits. She became a Christian while in her youth and lived a true devoted life. She endured her sufferings without a murmur and expressed herself as ready and willing to go, and was lying there waiting for the Lord to send after her. The happiest day of her experience was the day her husband professed religion. She was a member of the Adventist church and lived true to the doctrines of same. She enjoyed singing of religious songs but had no special favorite. Several times during her sickness she had friends and relatives gather around her bedside and sing the songs her father used to sing. She was always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to those in need. To the bereaved relatives the community extends sympathy.

A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

'Tis hard to break the tender cords
Where love has bound the heart,
'Tis hard, so hard to speak the words
"We must forever part."

Yet again we hope to meet them,
When the day of life is fled,
And in heaven with joy to greet them,
Where no farewell tears are shed.

She is safe in the arms of Jesus,
Safe on His gentle breast,
There by His love o'er shaded,
Sweetly her soul is at rest.

God in His heavenly wisdom
Has claimed the boon His love had given,
And though the body moulders here
The soul is safe in heaven.
